HUBBARD GLACIER | THURSDAY, MAY 27, 2010

DRESS: SMART CASUAL WEATHER: MOSTLY SUNNY 66F/19C

Welcome to Hubbard Glacier

Of all the region's natural wonders, massive Hubbard Glacier has perhaps drawn the most attention during recent years. Accurately described only in superlatives, North America's longest tidewater glacier is spawned on the slopes of lofty Mount Logan, Canada's tallest peak. The frozen arm is a branch of a massive icefield that sprawls across the highland valleys between Logan and the surrounding mountain range. The active natural formation seems almost alive. In 1986, the frozen river surged forward nearly 50 feet in a single day, sealing shut the entrance to Russell Fjord (now Russell Lake). As the ice-choked channel filled with fresh water, Yakutat residents began to fear their community might be lost in the rising flood, but just as suddenly as it had formed, the natural dam broke, and the water level subsided to a safe level. More than 75 miles long, the glacier face is an impressive sight for passing ships. It is more than six miles wide at its widest point, and its tallest face towers 500 feet above Disenchantment Bay, a small section of Yakutat Bay. Hubbard Glacier is fairly active. Calving describes the breaking off of ice at the moraine (face) of a tidewater glacier. The resulting icebergs crash into the sea with tremendous force – most of the "daughter" bergs are small, but size is relative. Some of the "tiny" blocks are as tall as 30-storey buildings! The natural forces are impressive and usually delight happy camera-toting observers (who watch from a safe distance).

ACCESS TO THE BOW

Weather and seas permitting, we will provide access to the forward observation deck during daylight hours. To access the bow please use the Lower Promenade doors on deck 3, forward.

SCENIC CRUISING COMMENTARY

Narration can be heard in the Crow's Nest, 9, on all outer decks and by tuning into channel 5 of your stateroom radio, as well as on channel 44 of your stateroom television.
