Welcome to Juneau, Alaska

In the late 19th century, a Tlingit Chief named Kowee led two drunken prospectors to a creek which emptied into the Gastineau Channel. After a few hours of panning, the prospectors, Richard Harris and Joe Juneau, found gold. That discovery changed not only their lives, but the course of history and the face of Alaska itself. On October 4, 1880, Harris and Juneau laid claim to the area which they called Gold Creek. Their discovery produced one of the largest finds in the history of the Alaska Gold Rush era. Juneau is nestled between Mount Juneau (3,576 ft.) and Mount Roberts (3,819 ft.) which gives the town not only a beautiful, scenic setting, but also a natural protection against the cold winds and permafrost which are so much a part of life in Alaska. Glaciers like Mendenhall, Taku and Herbert help contribute not only to the mild climate in Juneau, but also to Juneau's isolation from the rest of Alaska. In 1912, the Capital of Alaska was moved from Sitka to Juneau, where it has remained ever since. Its inability to expand has caused many to seek to change the capital to Anchorage, but for now, all such efforts have failed. Although the Federal Buildings dot the horizon, Juneau has maintained most of its original gold rush architectural heritage because the town has not suffered any major fires, as have many of Alaska's other gold rush towns. The historic district, located in the downtown area of Juneau, is filled with buildings and houses as colorful as Juneau's past.

FROM THE NAVIGATOR

Overnight we re-entered the inside passages of South East Alaska. For the third and final time we transited Icy Strait heading east, turned north at Rocky Island and this time rounded Point Retreat to head south in Saginaw Channel which leads to Stephens Passage. At the southernmost point of Douglas Island we turned to the north again and entered Gastineau Channel between Point Salisbury and Point Tantalion. Various speed restrictions apply in this channel which stretches 8 miles with Juneau Harbour located at its north end.
